Monetary.

Street rates for money are without material change though the tendency is downward, and the demand diminishing. First class paper, of which there is very little offering, is readily negonated, while other descriptions go at high rates and with difficulty. In stocks, there is nothing doing, and quotations are nominal.— Exchange is dull at last week's rates on New York The plethora of money in the Eastern oties continues, and we hope that ere long we may be able to note a greater improvement in monetary affairs in this city. We gave yesterday, the latest quotations for Land Warrants.
